Chapter 141: Empowering the Shadow Legion

Sung Jin-Woo's newly created centillions of living shadows were not just numerous; they were masterpieces of power and ingenuity. With his divine abilities, he transformed them into more than mere soldiers-they became independent entities capable of holding dominion over entire realms.

The Gifts of Power

1. Black Wings of Dominion:
Each living shadow was gifted a pair of black wings, embodying the essence of the Shadow Monarch's power. These wings granted them supreme mobility across dimensions, allowing them to traverse realms and battlefields effortlessly.

2. The Second Black Heart:
At the core of each shadow's being, Sung Jin-Woo implanted a second black heart, a boundless source of mana. This heart ensured they had an inexhaustible reserve of energy, enabling them to sustain prolonged battles, cast high-tier spells, and power divine weapons without faltering.

3. Shadow Worlds:
Like their creator, each living shadow was granted their own shadow world, an internal dimension they could shape and control. These worlds were home to their shadow armies, ranging from millions to billions of soldiers, all drawn from the shadow essence.

Unparalleled Strength

The shadows were given strength that placed them among the most powerful beings in existence:

1. Hunter Rankings:

Their power ranged from S^{9}-Rank to S^{99}-Rank, dwarfing Earth's most powerful hunters, who barely reached S^{7}-Rank.

Each shadow was a walking catastrophe, capable of annihilating entire armies or realms on their own.

2. Skill Versatility:
They were masters of combat, spellcasting, and strategy. Their combat prowess was rivaled only by their ability to adapt to any situation, making them the ultimate soldiers.

Arming the Shadows

Sung Jin-Woo equipped his living shadows with the finest weaponry:

1. Mana Guns and Rifles:

Ranged weapons powered by their infinite mana reserves.

Capable of firing mana-infused projectiles with devastating precision and destructive force.

2. Divine Blades:

Forged from the shadows themselves, these weapons were indestructible and capable of cutting through any material, including divine defenses.

Each blade was tailored to its wielder, resonating with their unique shadow essence.

The Shadows as Lords

With their immense power and independence, the shadows were not merely soldiers; they were shadow lords in their own right:

1. Commanders of Armies:
Each shadow had their own shadow army, rivaling the size and strength of the Divine Triad's other forces.

2. Realm Guardians:
Shadows were assigned to defend realms under Sung Jin-Woo's dominion, ensuring that no threat could rise without facing insurmountable resistance.

A World of Balance and Power

The empowerment of the living shadows created a delicate balance:

1. Ultimate Defense:
No realm under Sung Jin-Woo's watch could be threatened without the invincible shadows intercepting.

2. A Shadowed Peace:
The shadows, with their omnipresence and overwhelming strength, enforced peace across the multiverse, but also instilled a sense of awe and fear.

3. Expanding Influence:
By granting them independence and immense power, Sung Jin-Woo effectively created countless extensions of himself, ensuring his influence touched every corner of the multiverse.

The Apex of Shadow Creation

The shadows, now armed and empowered, were no longer just servants-they were the foundation of a new era, ensuring that Sung Jin-Woo's dominion would endure forever.

The God of Shadows and Life had built a legacy that transcended even the vastness of the multiverse, with centillions of loyal shadows standing as the unshakable pillars of his eternal reign.